1 I lift up my eyes to the hills—
from where will my help come?
2 My help comes from the Lord,
who made heaven and earth.
3 He will not let your foot be moved;
he who keeps you will not slumber.
4 He who keeps Israel
will neither slumber nor sleep.
5 The Lord is your keeper;
the Lord is your shade at your right hand.
6 The sun shall not strike you by day,
nor the moon by night.
7 The Lord will keep you from all evil;
he will keep your life.
8 The Lord will keep your going out and your coming in from this time on and for evermore.

Heavenly Father,
whose blessed Son was revealed

REFLECTION

Zephaniah 1:7, 12-end 1 Thessalonians 5:1-11 Matthew 25:14-30

It's sometimes said that a good preacher's job is to comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable. The prophets managed this at a stroke in their visions of 'the day of the Lord', and Zephaniah (whose comforting last few words are what we usually read) certainly doesn't pull any punches with the comfortable. It's a tradition of teaching that Jesus follows in his round condemnation of the corrupt leaders of Israel. 'The day of the Lord' is essentially about the great reversal: the hungry will be filled with good things and the rich sent empty away.

Whether you relish this reversal, dread it, or simply ignore it, anyone who hungers and thirsts for righteousness will want to see an end to all suffering – certainly their own – by the overthrow of powerful oppressors. It's a near-universal human longing (exploited gleefully by many in the media) to see the mighty put down from their seats, even if the elevation of the humble and meek doesn't make such good clickbait.

The mighty are usually efficient at preventing their own downfall, and often stand together when found out. Justice may catch up with a few, but sadly, it's in the nature of the merciless to maintain a tight grip on their power. The 'day of the Lord' seems only to be slowly, painfully realised – at least for now - not by a greater power violently annihilating a smaller one, but by Jesus's own methods, learned from his Father: patience and long-suffering, love, mercy, truth, obedience-unto-death. Revelation draws on the same prophetic tradition: it depicts the hidden but nonetheless fundamental reversal of power realised in and by the crucified and risen Christ. You just need eyes to see it.

Matthew's parable of the talents which immediately follows the parable of the wise and foolish virgins teaches the disciples themselves something more. The 5/2 and the forecast punishment clarify who will be called to account on this day of reckoning : it's for Christ's teachers to pass on the teaching they're given with confidence, joy and energy. The Kingdom of Heaven is about service, responsibility – it's busy. Shepherds have freedom of choice about if and how they serve, and they're given different opportunities – but they will be called to account for how they've passed on what they have received.
